Unparalleled Developments!

Beautiful Homes

FOR ALL!

Never before in the history of real estate operations in Southern California has a tract of land been developed so successfully and rapidly as that at ETIWANDA.

The reasons for this remarkable success have been found in the liberal management of the proprietors in putting everything in first-class shape for a home for those who have means to surround themselves with the luxuries as well as the necessaries of life, and at the same time engage in a business that yields large profits in return for intelligent labor.

The ETIWANDA water supply is definite and abundant. It will irrigate when fully developed from 3,500 to 5,000 acres of land. It is based on one inch of water under a four inch pressure to eight acres of land—the water to be measured on the 15th of July.

The owners of land own and control the Company that owns the water, and hence the consumer gets his water at cost. Each stockholder is entitled to his pro rata of water, and there can never be any disputes about how much land the water is to cover, or what the price is to be.

The water is conducted to each ten acre tract in concrete pipes without expense to the purchaser.

The proprietors of the tract are grading all the streets and setting out shade trees along on either side thereof.

A hotel is being built at the center of a town plat, located about two miles from the Southern Pacific Railroad, where a station will soon be established.

During the dull portion of the season sales have been numerous on this tract. Already nearly one thousand acres have been sold, and next winter several hundred acres of the tract will be planted to orchard and vineyard.

Public confidence was never stronger in any tract than this; no one questions either the quality of the soil or the reliability and complete system of the water supply.

The price of land from the very first has been held firmly at $100 per acre, but the price has now been advanced to $125 and $150 per acre, according to location.

The proprietors desire to sell at least 2,000 acres more before the summer of 1883, and from present indications this task will be any easy one. Those who buy first will of course have advantage of choice of location.

Chaffey Brothers will erect a school house at once and have a public school open prior to January 1.

A telephone line has been put up connecting ETIWANDA with the telephone system of San Bernardino county, which places this tract on speaking terms with San Bernardino, Colton, Riverside and Redlands.

A lithographic sketch of the tract, together with a map of the lands sold and to be sold accompanied by a more complete description of the lands, will be furnished on application at any time after August 20th.

MATAMORAS, August 29.—Only a few new cases to-day.

SPREADING AT PENSACOLA.

WASHIGTON, August 29.—Captain Hopkins, commanding the navy yard at Pensacola, has informed the Navy Department that yellow fever is spreading at Pensacola, and that extra precautions are necessary.

PENSACOLA, Fla., August 29.—Two cases of yellow fever have been developed in this city.

THE LASH.

Flogging Indian Rebel Prisoners in the Creek Nation.

LITTLE ROCK, August 29.—An Indian Territory special says that thirteen Indians who engaged in the recent rebellion in the Creek Nation have been captured, tried, found guilty and publicly whipped at Cane Creek, Muskogee District, Creek Nation. Each man received one hundred lashes on his bare back. The sentence and punishment caused considerable excitement, but no attempt was made to rescue the prisoners. Each received their lashes with sullen and stoical indifference. Their backs presented a horrible sight after the whipping, being cut and bruised in a shocking manner.

One Hundred Lashes.

CHICAGO, August 29.—An Indian Territory special says that 13 prisoners taken during the rebellion in the Creek Nation are just found guilty and punished with 100 lashes on their backs. Chief Cheyote refused pardon to the rebels, although there was a large petition for clemency. Two or three of the culprits almost fainted. A majority exhibited iron nerve.

The President on a Fox-Trail.

NEWPORT, R. I., August 29.—President Arthur attended a fox hunt yesterday afternoon. The start was witnessed by a large number of spectators. About thirty followed the hounds. The President last night was the guest of John Wells, of New York, who gave an elaborate dinner.

Canterbury Better.

LONDON, August 29.—The physicians of the Archbishop of Canterbury announce a mitigation of the worst symptoms of his illness.

BEYOND THE BRINY.

Wholesale Resignations of Irish Constables.

DUBLIN, August 29.—The people of Limerick have practically become their own policemen, a large majority of the constabulary having refused to go into further duty. Telegrams inquiring what day is to be fixed for the resignation of the constabulary embody the dispatches passing between stations in different parts of the country. Large numbers made inquiries at the various emigration offices to-day, and the opinion is prevalent that a hundred men of ten years' service and under will shortly resign.

LIMERICK, August 29.—Fifty-seven of the constabulary resigned up to 11 o'clock last night. The men have received telegrams from comrades in the various districts expressing their determination to resign in three days unless the five dismissed sub-constables are reinstated.

Turks and Greeks at War.

ATHENS, August 29.—Yesterday morning the Turkish troops attacked the Greeks all along the front, from Zorbas to Semain, and fighting was continued to-day. The Greeks lost four killed and ten wounded. The Government dispatched 10,000 infantry and artillery and gens d'armes to the frontier.

Syrian Affairs Less Serious.

PARIS, August 29.—At a cabinet council to-day, Duclerc, president of the council, read dispatches from Syria, reporting a more satisfactory state of affairs there. He also announced that all revolted Tunisian troops, who took refuge in Tripoli, have returned to their homes.

The Alarming Siberian Plague.

ST. PETERSBURG, August 29.—The Siberian plague has appeared to an alarming extent in the most widely separated quarters of Europe and Russia. One death has occurred from the disease at Odessa.

Corean Didoes.

LONDON, August 29—A telegram from Corea states that the uncle of the King has seized the throne.

Tax-Suit Compromised.

SAN DIEGO, August 29.—The Southern Pacific Railroad tax-suit was compromised to-day on a basis of $10,500 per mile and costs.

Sunday in the Country.

A member of the Christian Church, recently in San Francisco, gave his views as to how plain folks in the country look at the Sunday question, as it now stands before our people. His views are held by so many everywhere outside of San Francisco, that we publish the substance as given in the San Francisco Argonaut. He said:

"The sentiment is deep and widespread among the more respectable Democrats—church members and others—that the Democratic party has been guilty not only of a deliberate and wanton disregard of the feelings of all religious persons; that it has attacked Sunday not only as a day of religious worship, but has assaulted an institution that belongs to civilization, and done so in the interest of law-breakers and a criminal class in order to secure votes. I am a farmer, and if I wanted to purchase goods, get mail, or have my horses shod, I went to the village on Saturday. Thus, in my county, Saturday afternoon became, by common consent, a sort of half holiday, and all the neighboring farmers congregated at the village. I never thought much about Sunday laws—in fact, I never heard much about them until of recent years. The first real serious opposition to a Sunday law that I ever heard of came from San Francisco. Upon inquiry, I ascertained that the liquor-dealers would not close on Sunday. They claimed the right to keep open saloons for selling grog.

"I am, I suppose, a temperance man. I have never signed a pledge or joined a temperance socity. I drink wine. I have a small vineyard, and I make wine. I recognize the evil of alcoholic drink. I know the consequences in crime, poverty, domestic trouble, taxes, and discomforts which exist in the world by reason of the use of alcohol, and when this legal contest came between the temperance people and the saloon people, I was naturally in sympathy with the temperance people. When the Supreme Court decided that saloons must be closed on Sunday, I felt, as I suppose all law-abiding citizens felt, that the law ought to be obeyed; and when the beer-brewers, distillers, wholesale liquor dealers, lager beer saloon-keepers, and corner grocery whiskey venders of San Francisco formed an organization, raised funds, hired lawyers, bribed jurors, and impeded the course of justice by thronging the courts with cases, I felt just the least bit indignant.

"When the Democratic State Convention assembled I did not dream of this question becoming a party issue, because I supposed that the principle of allowing Sunday as a day of rest, recreation and worship, was a recognized one, and had been accepted and protected by law for perhaps hundreds of years. When, therefore, I found that the Democratic party had, in the interest of whisky-makers and traffickers, determined to break down and destroy the whole spirit of the Sunday law, wipe out the distinction between it and other days, allow courts and banks, stores and shops, to keep open; allow no protection to labor, no rest to working men on Sunday, I gave the matter some attention. I talked with my neighbors about it. We asked ourselves the occasion of this new departure, and we have come to the conclusion that the Democratic party wants the whisky vote more than it wants the church vote, and that it wants the criminal element of society more than it wants the respectable element. The League of Freedom organization is a combination of law-breakers in the interest of alcohol; and in this interest and to secure its political support the Democracy has determined to destroy the Sunday

LET US HAVE A CITY HALL.

The time has come in the history of Los Angeles when the necessities of the city demand more attention to the erection of public buildings for the use of the city officials. Few cities of the commercial importance of Los Angeles are so sadly lacking in public buildings of any kind. That so important a body as the City Council should meet in such a dirty, dingy and miserable room as at present witnesses their deliberations is a crying shame. There is not a small town in the State that cannot show as creditable a clerk's office as the one in which that official transacts the important business of the municipality. Steps were taken to erect a much-needed City Hall, but the legal necessity of the issuance of city bonds was an obstacle which deterred the further prosecution of the project. Taking it for granted that those in authority intend, at the proper time, to make the requisite effort to be empowered by the Legislature to issue bonds for the purposes of such building, a few suggestions on the subject are pertinent, and we trust will receive due consideration from the city government.

In the construction of a public building of the importance of a City Hall, a liberal expenditure of money is an economy rather than an extravagance. It is to be borne in mind that while a building of $30,000 or $40,000 cost would be a suitable one for the Los Angeles of to-day, it might be a very mediocre one for the Los Angeles of ten years hence. Let us have a City Hall which will be a credit to the city now and to the city when is has doubled or trebled its population and wealth. How does the city stand at present? Almost every office required for the workings of the municipal government is hired from private individuals. The annual rental of these offices amounts to the interest on $8000; to which sum add the proceeds of the sale of the city's interest in the property on Spring street, now occupied by the offices of the Chief of Police and the City Clerk, and a handsome amount is made up. At the very lowest the total would foot up $20,000. This is a fair portion of the entire amount necessary.

Let us say the city will build a $60,000 City Hall. From the above it appears that one-third of that amount can be raised by the saving to the city of rent and by the sale of a portion of its property now practically wasted. Bonds to the amount of $40,000 could then be issued without materially increasing the burdens of taxation. On the present basis of taxation the property owners would not feel the increase, and should property in the city continue to increase in value at the present rate, the debt of the city will be purely a nominal one. In view of the fact that the Board of Education has been so anxious to sell the Spring-street school property, why should not the city have it appraised and turned over to the Board in value, in lieu of selling. The full value of the property could not possibly be obtained and the city would find great difficulty in obtaining as suitable a site for double the money which a sale of the Spring-street property would bring.

A more favorable location could not well be found than the corner of Second and Spring streets. A building of the kind we are speaking of must be well and centrally located, and to obtain such a location would require an amount of money beyond all reasonableness at the present price of city lots. There are many things to recommend the above-mentioned corner, and the selecting of that site would tend to rapidly improve that portion of the city and beautify that splendid thoroughfare. There may be other suitable locations, however. The great thing is to have the building.

ONE acre of alfalfa will keep two cows the year round. The milk of each cow will sell at the cheese factory for twenty-five cents per day. These are much lower than the figures given by those who have tried it, and still at these figures ten acres of alfalfa with a few hours work morning and evening will give an income of $5 per day on an investment of about $2000. Why should money be idle where there are such opportunities for safe investment?

THE suggestion is made that women be selected for school superintendents. There is no good reason why they would not make good ones if the right persons be selected. We see, by the way, that a lady, Miss Wheelock, of Carpinteria, has been nominated for school superintendent by one of the party conventions of Santa Barbara county.

THE neutrality of the Suez Canal has clearly been violated by England. Will the nations submit to the indignity? The step is a bold one; it is playing with edged tools, and those edged tools are the forest of bayonets, the million swords of armed Europe

A DEMOCRATIC paper in a neighboring county says the Greenback party of its county never had but two members. One of them was sent to the penitentiary, and the other, being lonesome, moved away.

If Stoneman was the choice between two evils, as the Examiner asserted, how big an evil is Stoneman anyhow?—[Oakland Tribune.

A SONORA COMPLICATION.

In the matter of the threatened revolution in Sonora, there appears to be an African in the woodpile. A Hermosillo correspondent of the Tombstone Independent scouts the idea that an attempt will be made by ex-Governor Torres to overturn the government of Ortiz, the present chief executive of Sonora. On the contrary, quite the reverse, these chiefs are warm personal friends, and the real object of the alleged revolutionary movement is said to be the continuing of the present State government in power. The way the correspondent puts it up is this: Ortiz is the head of the progressist party in the State. The progressists are in favor of the Americans, American capital and American railway building. Torres and his adherents likewise. Reciprocally, the Sonora Railway people (Americans,) are in favor of the progressist party. The two are working together. The "outs," comprising the old Pesquiera following, are bitterly against American capital and methods, and openly hostile to the railroad company. A State election is to be held in October. The Ortiz party, backed by the railway company, will attempt to carry the election at all hazards. The railroad people have been busy instigating the organization of military companies in nearly every town in the State, furnishing the funds for equipping them. The ostensible object of all this military activity is the putting down of the contemplated revolution of the Torres tribe. Torres is marching on Hermosillo with five hundred Federal troops, ostensibly to overthrow Ortiz, but really to cooperate with him. Ortiz has mobilized the National Guards of the sovereign State of Sonora, organized a "battalion" (?) of Gatling guns, stored four thousand stand of Remington rifles and slathers of ammunition at Hermosillo, and, in short, has prepared to carry blood-red war into the camp of the imaginary foe, if we are to believe late telegrams. He has, in fact, as appears from this veracious correspondent, prepared, not for carrying war, but an election.

Such is another chapter in Mexican politico-military statesmanship. It would be notable if it were written of any other country than "the sister Republic."

RIVER AND HARBOR BILLS.

The first formal river and harbor bill passed by the Congress of the United States was in 1825. It contained five items. That of 1826 contained nineteen items and called for $85,320—a sum which at that time was regarded as very extravagant. The Jackson regime was opposed to internal improvements, yet, in 1831, "Old Hickory" approved a bill containing thirty-one items and expending $434,451. From this day, however, the appropriations for river and harbor improvements rapidly increased, and jobbers added many fraudulent items to the bills. In 1825 the river and harbor bill covered five large and closely printed pages. During the war little was done, but in 1866 the bill for these purposes covered four pages, in 1873, seven pages, and in 1875 fourteen pages. This year it extends over thirty-five pages and embraces nearly five hundred items. The figures show that the growth of expenditures during recent years has been enormous—from $5,000,000 in 1873 to $18,000,000 in 1882. What a story of greed, wastefulness, log-rolling lobbying and legislative bargaining these figures tell!

THE Californian magazine for September announces that with its next issue it will revive and adopt the name of The Overland—a sensible change, for the name of the old monthly, besides being eminently appropriate for a Pacific Coast magazine, was widely known and is yet fondly remembered, and may be said to have a positive value which the name of its successor never succeeded in acquiring. The grizzly design will be revived also.

THE following figures of the population of Egypt show what England has to contend with in the matter of numbers, and what she will acquire if annexation is the end aimed at—provided her arms are victorious in the pending struggle: Cairo, 327,462; Alexandria, 165,752; Damietta, 32,730; Rosetta, 16,243; Suez, 11,327; Port Said, 3845; other towns, 11,747; provinces, 4,948,512. Total, 5,517,627.

DORSEY claims to have been offered the Secretaryship of the Interior by President Garfield. The St. Paul Pioneer-Press thinks that he ought to be offered the secretaryship of the interior of some state prison, and his acceptance of the favor insisted upon.

THE great case of Whisky vs. Sunday will be on trial from and after the adjournment of the Republican Convention until the first Tuesday in November, on which day the people of the State of California will render a verdict. Will it be for whisky or for Sunday?

Lieutenant Willard Young, a son of Brigham Young, the late much-married prophet of Salt Lake, is a professor of engineering at West Point. He was attending to his military duties at the academy when his father's estate was being settled up, and when the litigation began his agents wrote to him to know what they should do. He replied that he didn't care about quarrelling over the matter, and that he would take what the others didn't want. So a lot of railroad stock, supposed to be nearly worthless, was assigned to him. He took it, and the development of the Territory has since made him one of the richest of Brigham's heirs.

THE BABY.

BY MRS. HARRISON GRAY OTIS.

It was a pleasant afternoon,
And I sat reading in my room.

Without my window birds and flowers
Made lovely all the sunny hours.

And now and then I would peep out
At sound of happy laugh or shout

Of gleeful girls and merry boys.
At length I heard a little noise—

A gentle rap upon my door,
And then a patter on the floor.

And looking up, before me stood
A little maiden from the wood.

She had such golden sunny hair,
Her dimpled cheeks were very fair.

Her home was in a cottage small,
Close by a shining waterfall,

Where water-drops and sunbeams played,
And loveliest of rainbows made;

Where tender little mosses grew,
And berries red, all wet with dew.

"I've tum," with smiling face said she,
"To ask you to tum home with me.

"We've dot a baby to our house,
'Tis hardly bigger 'an a mouse.

"I fink it tummed down from e sky,
I seed its wings as it went by.

"Such pretty soft white wings; but now
It's losted 'em, I don't know how.

"Such cunning 'ittle eyes, so blue
I 'spect they's bits of sky—don't you?

"A pretty dimple in its chin,
I dess a angel kissed it in.

"It cries sometimes, wif all ma's care;
I dess it wishes Dod was there.

"I s'pose it wants 'e angels too;
Poor 'ittle fing, what will it do?

"I wonder if it runned away—
Dot losted out of Heaven one day.

"But Dod tood find it, if he would,
But how I'd fy now if he should."

HOW HE SAVED HER.

A STORY FOUNDED ON EARLY CALIFORNIA HISTORY.

BY H. W. B.

In the year 1835 the Mexican Government had resolved to form a village near the cove Yerba Buena. Much discussion was carried on as to the name, but it was finally decided that the above name should be given on account of the medical qualities of a good herb or mint that grew in great profusion over the country, and which was supposed to possess wonderful healing properties for man and beast.

Where now stands the proud city of San Francisco, with its thousands of inhabitants and untold wealth, its shores stretching for miles along one of the finest bays in the world, was then to be seen only the wigwam of the Indian and the cabin of some venturesome Mexicans who had strayed from some small trading craft carrying produce from various missions along the coast.

Up to the above date Yerba Buena had scarcely a name or existence. The cove had been occasionally approached by Russian ships-of war, and by small craft paying yearly visits for meat and other supplies of food obtainable, and taking away as freight hides and tallow in exchange for any kind of goods or merchandise bought. The news of the wonderful herb had spread among sailors, and that was taken away in large quantities for tea.

About this time a vessel commanded by a young Yankee captain left Boston harbor, laden with a mixed cargo and bound for the Pacific Coast. The Captain, in spite of the evil forebodings of his friends, had fully made up his mind that the Pacific Coast should be his destination. He was well up in the geography of the country; his ship was a staunch one, and he had daring enough in his nature to compel him to go ahead in anything he had once settled on. There was, therefore, no reason why he should not make the voyage which he knew would be followed by others soon. Thus, fully laden, and with a mate as daring as as himself, and a Yankee crew, he set sail amidst hand-shaking and tears, evil predictions, and with little encouragement; but the plucky Captain saw something ahead, which no entreaties would hinder; the bright star of his destiny shone never brighter He intended, if all was well, to establish a mercantile business somewhere along the Spanish coast. With the incidents usually accompanying such a voyage, in the early fall of 1836, the good ship "Hardy" cast anchor near the cove of Yerba Buena. There lay at anchor two schooners belonging to the harbor-master who had been appointed by the Governor at the time the name was given to the cove. As Captain Philip of the "Hardy" sat on deck one evening soon after his arrival, his vessel was approached by a small boat sent from the schooner lying a good half mile distant, and he was asked what was his business in these waters? To which he replied that he had a mixed cargo and would be happy to supply them, but his intention was to proceed to Monterey after a few days. He was therefore kindly invited to go on shore, which he promised to do the next day, and returned the compliment by calling together his crew to pay their respects to the native Californians. The following day found them on shore. The commandante was so well pleased with his visitors that he offered them a large piece of land on which to settle, provided Captain Philip would establish a trading post near the entrance to the harbor.

The Captain gladly accepted with the terms, and set to work at once to build him a house or dwelling, which was simply a tent supported on four red-wood posts and covered with a ship's foresail.

It was arranged between Capt. Philip and his mate that one should remain at the cove, while the other should carry on the business of trading between the missions. Months went on, and the Captain found his business increasing and his purse much heavier by the pressure of a few doubloons which had found their way into the hands of the people through some English captains.

Mate Lane had bantered the captain to let him, Lane, remain in charge of the port while the vessel was gone to Monterey. Having heard much of the country, and desiring to see it, Capt. Philip agreed to this, and accordingly secured letters to the commandante, a most important personage, named Castro, a pure-blooded Mexican.

The day the Captain set sail he had noticed a black-looking brig named Vixen at anchor not far from where his vessel lay, and had called his mate's attention to it, and from him learned it was a coaster in the employ of the commandante at Monterey.

Capt. Philip arrived at Monterey in due season, and at once proceeded to the house of the commandante. His knowledge of Spanish was quite limited, and with the naturally suspicious feelings of the people he feared difficulty in getting a hearing.

The port stood back some distance from the landing, with a much-beaten path leading to it. Scattered here and there were cabins, and nearer down to the beach were storehouses for the use of vessels. The sun was just sinking into the horizon as the Captain sauntered up the path leading to the house.

As he heared the sound of music met his ear. Never in all his life in Massachusetts had he heard such sweet strains. Surely, thought he, the performer is no ordinary player; she touches the strings like one perfect. Captain Phillip was charmed, to say the least. Slowly he wended his way, listening until the entrance was reached. Lingering near the threshold till the sound died away, he tapped at the door and was soon met by the singer, with guitar in hand, who invited him in and in her native tongue asked him to be seated. If the Captain had ever thought the fair sex lovely, he was sure he had now met one divine. Around her head was thrown a tissue shawl which fell in graceful folds across the breast and dropping to the skirt. A few minutes conversation convinced him he stood in the presence of no ordinary person. Castro's wife was the daughter of Jose Morego, of full Castilian blood, by whom there was one daughter, the one now before him. Castro, though a proud and overbearing person to all others around him, for his daughter he had the greatest tenderness. Nothing had been left undone to make her happy. Educated in one of the finest convents in his native land, he found after the loss of his wife, whom he idolized, his daughter alone was all he ever wished or cared for. He was at perfect peace with all the world when his idol Anita was near.

Thus the time had passed, days into months and months into years, and the old commandante was satisfied to remain so to the end of his years, little thinking of the heart-throbs of his child, shut out as she was from all the world, except the little one made by the incoming and outgoing vessels in their business of traffic. Is it a wonder, then, that the heart of Anita beat high in the presence of the noble-looking Yankee Captain? Need we wonder if the Captain thought he had found the guiding star of his life? The hours seemed but seconds while he lingered awaiting her father's return. It did not take Anita long to discover that the Captain knew little of her native tongue, and said: "I will talk to you in your own language, in which my father has been instructing me. It may not be as perfect as your own, but we can understand." He feared to lose one note of her silvery voice. Soon her father returned, and at once entered into animated conversation with the Captain. The arrangements were made for Captain Phillip to continue his business in Yerba Buena and trade with his people, coming to Monterey as often as he could himself; at the same time remarking that although he had vessels in the trade they would never come in conflict with him, as he was favorably impressed with the Yankee Captain. He told him, in a kindly manner, how to deal with his people, who were suspicious, and usually stubborn and hard to get on with.

The morning was lovely, and Captain Phillip boarded his vessel and prepared to unload his freight. Never did men find their Captain in such good humor. Something surely had seized upon him! Little did they dream that the dark-eyed maiden of the port had anything to do with it. The crew wondered why their Captain was in no hurry to depart, and each day he lingered as if he could not tear himself from his bright-eyed beauty. In a few words, the Captain was in love, and it did not take long to convince him that it was reciprocated; but how was he to break the news to her father, and how was he to be received, were the questions now uppermost in his mind. Would her father consent to give him a treasure so prized? Oh! keen agony He dare not think of leaving without saying a word to Anita's father. He would go to her and be governed by her advice, no matter how great the pain of parting. For had she not promised to share his fate? Thus evening found him again in her presence. He told of his love as a nun counts her beads, over and over again, and she in broken tongue bade him hope. "Go from me now," she said, and when you come again I will have paved the way to the entrance of a father's heart, though stern to all others, to Anita never, and if he forgets not his love for me he will bid me God speed with the lover of my choice. Go, bearing in your heart these words: "No ay cerradura si es de oro la gongua." Thus they parted, he to dream of his dark-eyed Anita, and she, as is the custom of her people, to prepare for his early return. Captain Philip had left a letter to the Don telling him of his love for Anita, and hoping to return soon and ask of him her hand.

Did the Don go into a passion and denounce the Yankee Captain? No, he sought his daughter and told her of the letter the Captain had left, and after she had told of her love for the noble Yankee, he blessed her for her choice, and in feeble accents said: "Quien pregunto no yerra." The time passed quickly to the separated lovers. Nor was the Captain idle during his absence in Yerba Buena. He built him a little home and furnished it as comfortably as the means of the country would permit, expecting to improve it as soon as possible. He had told her of the rude home he would have to take her to; she replied that with his love she was content, however humble the home. The return trip was one of joy. The sailors entered into the good spirit of their Captain. Hour after hour did he num the songs Anita sang until each sailor caught the strains and would join in with him. The time flew on merry wings till Monterey was reached at sunset one evening. For a mile before the vessel reached the landing Anita had seen the signal color, according to promise, and when the vessel reached her moorings she was there to greet her lover. The cause of their Captain's good nature was no longer a secret to the sailors. Many times the faithful Francisco was heard to mutter in Spanish, and then would emerge from his hiding place having a broad smile on his face. He, too, had found the Captain's secret. The evening was such as lovers like—soft moonlight. As far as the eye could reach delightful dells scooped out among the hills, evergreens bordering and fringing their quiet beauty, valleys smiling with flowers of every hue, and prominent knolls covered with shrubs and thickly studded with the cypress from which the village took its name, a large grove of which stood prominent in the background. Such was the scene that met the eye of the Captain, and never was an evening more propitious for lovers. It did not take long for him to fly ashore after giving hasty orders to his men. Met by Anita, they strolled up the walk to meet the Don, who stood leaning against a pillar, partly concealed, watching the lovers. At the sight of him all doubts and fears fled, and the Captain knew his suit was safe.

The Don met him warmly, and was not long in broaching the subject nearest to his heart. Frankly the Captain told of his love for his daughter, and asked his blessing. "Take her, my son," said the Don tearfully and in broken accents; "she has been my crown jewel; make her as happy as I have done, and you have my blessing." He placed their hands together, and clasping both with his, he kissed them and left them alone. As Anita saw her father wander off with downcast look, she almost blamed herself for being so selfish, but it would not be long before he would be with them; so she comforted herself.

The next day found her busy preparing for the wedding. It was arranged that it should take place at once, and in a fortnight the Hardy was to bear them to Yerba Buena. Each day brought its round of preparations, and although it was the happiest time in Anita's life, she could not help but weep at the thought of leaving her dear, kind father. The Don consoled her, striving each day to be unselfish and forget all but her happiness.

The morning of the bridal broke lovely—one of those beautiful southern days when all nature seems to rest. The air was heavy with the perfume of shrub and flowers and the songs of birds. The marriage was to take place at eventide, in the grove of cypress beyond the fort. It was a custom in southern countries to hold weddings outdoors. The country for miles around had been bidden to the wedding. The dusky maids and swarthy Mexicans all alike shared in the joys of the occasion. Nothing had been left undone by the Don to make the occasion one long to be remembered. He had called in his vessels and bade his men to the ceremony. Anita's maids had decked her in bridal array fit for a queen. She wore the rich Spanish laces that had decked her mother's bridal. The guests had arrived early, each bringing fruits and flowers, birds and jewels, as was the custom, to lay at the feet of the bride. Each one was anxious to catch a glimpse of the Yankee Captain, as he was styled, and never did he appear to better advantage than upon this occasion. All joined in exclamations of pleasure at Anita's choice.

The bells on the old Mission church rang out their merriest peals while the sun lingered above the horizon. The padre who was to perform the ceremony had just alighted from his horse at the entrance to the grove, when a heavy hand was laid upon his shoulder. He turned quickly, to meet one of his countrymen, a swarthy-looking fellow, who inquired the meaning of the merry-making.

The padre replied that soon Anita would be the bride of the dark-eyed Captain, at the same time directing his eyes to where they were standing. Anita caught his eye and turned pale. She soon recovered, however, and felt relieved when she saw the Mexican disappear behind the trees, but she did not forget the incident. She knew too well the curses of Morego meant something, and she was glad the Don was not an observer of the scene. Morego's life would have paid for his audacity. Had Anita heard the oaths sent up by Morego, as, peering through the trees, he saw the padre place the hand of Anita into that of the Captain, and as he pronounced them "man and wife" he stood trembling with anger. Had Anita listened to this she would have trembled with fear for their safety. But a round of joy and happy greetings went up from every side, and Anita was too happy in her new-found joy to think of else. If she appeared at times sad it was at the thought of parting with her father, who had been her idol. The Captain was too absorbed in the scene to notice the presence of strangers. So Morego stood in the back-ground, a silent listener of all going on. The festivities began with feasting. Four large bullocks had been prepared and roasted to a charm; sheep, chickens and game had been cooked till the rude tables groaned with their weight. There had also been prepared a drink called "matte," made from an herb grown in Paraguay, having the exhilarating effect of cognac, and is prepared by pouring boiling water on the leaves of the herb and then sweetening, and drinking through a tube. A cake called "Alphonse," with fruit, was distributed to each guest, the former being borne away as souvenirs of the feast. With music and bells, songs and dancing, the night passed into morning, and the departure of guests began.

The Captain was to remain another day and then set sail for their new home. The Don had given Anita a large band of cattle, and with the Captain they had gone to the hills to select them. Anita packed her trunks, much in the fashion of our people when preparing to travel, yet with a hope of soon returning to visit her father. A few of Anita's friends remained till their departure. Never did a bride leave her home and friends with fonder wishes and higher prospects before her, and yet Anita was sad; so noticeable that her devoted husband pantered her upon her melancholy, so unusual with her bright spirit. In vain did he plead for one snap of her fingers over her guitar, for one snatch of song, for one chord of music from the soul such as he had heard fall from her lips. But to all his entreaties she plead sadness in leaving her father, and the lover excused her. The passage up was a pleasant one. The Captain had made his cabin a little parlor for his bride, and when he would call her attention to some little work of his sailors who had done their part to relieve the cabin's dismal look, she would smile sadly, which made his heart sink within him. They arrived in due season at Yerba Buena and went to their humble home. The Captain often blamed himself for bringing Anita from her home and among strangers; he pitied her, and whenever he would censure himself for making her unhappy, poor Anita would sob to break her heart, and would smother him with kisses. Often she would resolve to tell her faithful husband of the scene on the night of the wedding; she would make a full confession of her meeting with Morego. She longed to tell him how she had met the Mexican at a fete, how he had loved her and pressed his claim for her hand, and when she rejected him he had vowed vengeance upon her, and to follow her to the end of the land. How little did Anita believe he would carry out his vows! Had she been more frank she would have saved herself months of agony, and have found her husband's protection. But Anita did no such thing. For many months she had not seen Morego, he had so carefully avoided her; he had feared her too. He well knew if the Don should suspect his attachment for his daughter his head would find the block; for her husband he cared little. So the time sped. Anita began to feel secure and happy. She talked of plans in the future, and Morego had slipped from her mind entirely. She no longer feared to be alone, a matter her husband had often teased her about.

One evening Anita sat alone, humming snatches of song, patiently awaiting the return of her husband, when she was startled by a loud rap at the door. Who could it be at that hour? She had foreboding of evil awaiting her. Hastily concealing a stiletto beneath the folds of her skirt she opened the door. A dark, rough Mexican handed her a dirty piece of paper, a leaf hastily torn from an old ledger, and at once disappeared. She hurriedly tore it open to read:

"On the New Year's Eve, to-morrow, I await your coming at the cove. The bearer of this note, my trusty, will be near to escort you to me. On your life, breathe not a word of this to your husband; if you should, a sadder fate awaits him than he ever dreamed. Morego is in earnest, and the curse of a Biscayan rests on him to-night! The Vixen lies at anchor near, and with this secret you are safe. If you dare disclose it, your life pays the forfeit! Anita, I swear! To-morrow at nine I await you at the cove. MOREGO."

AINAXAB,
The Celebrated Egyptian Elixir for the Skin.
We herewith append a few testimonials:

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29, 1882.
GENTLEMEN:—I have been using your Ainaxab, and find it a most delicious elixir, not only beneficial but agreeably refreshing for the skin. I shall continue to use it. Please send me three bottles. Yours truly,
LA VON TRAUTMANN,
Directress Gestinger Opera Troupe, S. F.

I have used your Ainaxab in my family for some time, and am much pleased with its action. It has a pleasant and cooling sensation to the skin, and to those affected with black spots or face worms, I can heartily recommend it, as their removal is almost instantaneous, one or two applications accomplishing the desired result. Respectfully, Dr. C. W. HIBBARD,
202 Stockton St., San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 17, 1882.
GENTLEMEN:—I have used your Ainaxab for two months, and find that it possesses all the good qualities you claim for it. I think it the best thing to remove the bad effects of paints or dry make up. I shall continue to use it as it gives me entire satisfaction.
Respectfully yours, LOUISE LESTER,
Prima Donna, Tivoli Theater.

I am not in the habit of giving testimonials, but take pleasure in saying to those who use face washes or powders of any kind, that none has given me more satisfaction or comfort than your Ainaxab. I feel convinced that when once used, no lady will be without it. From my own experience and observation of the effects of the Ainaxab upon others, I am thoroughly convinced that it is all you claim.
MRS. M. KHAYER, Nucleus Hotel, S. F.

If you do not find the Ainaxab at your druggists, send one dollar in postage stamps or postal order to our address, and it will be sent by express free of charge.

Our assortment is complete, and we can fill any sized order, from five cents to a thousand dollars, upon the shortest notice.
Our country customers, who live at a distance, can send in their orders to be filled and shipped by rail, and they will be dealt with as fairly and honestly as though the goods were passed to them over the counter.

Our strong point, however, lies in the fact that our goods are CHOICE, and that we will not carry inferior or second class goods upon any consideration.
Gilt Edged Butter is one of our specialties, and to this firm is due the full credit of first introducing this brand of butter to the trade of Southern California.
The Seneca Falls Dry Hop Yeast is another specialty which is becoming very popular with housewives. Every package is fully warranted to make white, light, sweet and healthful bread, when used according to directions. Sample packages given away.
We invite all whose attention is called to the above facts to give us a trial. This invitation is hardly necessary in the case of our old customer, because we know that they will come; therefore, it will apply more particularly to those who have never dealt with us. THE CITY.

Subscribers to the TIMES who do not receive their papers regularly and promptly will confer a favor upon the publishers by notifying the office.

Frank Johnson will require nine days in which to sober up, so the Justice of the City Court decided yesterday.

The State apportionment of the city school fund, $15,664, was deposited with City Treasurer Kays last Saturday.

Mr. A. Sperl has removed his blacksmith and wagon shop to the new building on First street near vine street.

H. H. Bixby is covering the frame buildings in his corral with sheet iron, in compliance with the city ordinance.

The Curtis case still hangs on without a trial being reached. A speedy disposition of the case now, however, seems imminent.

Little was done in the Superior Court yesterday in either department. The dull days are affecting the courts as well as every other pursuit.

Rev. C. J. Hutchins delivered his farewell sermon at the Congregational Church last Sunday. His successor is the Rev. Wm. Wells, of Napa, Cal.

Mr. Geo. F. McLellan went down to Willmore to view the landscape o'er. He was conquered, and invested in two lots before he got away.

Three mortgages were released to-day. The books of the County Recorder showed an unusual amount of recordation of deeds yesterday and business was otherwise brisk.

Miss Cora Badeau, who was taken suddenly ill a few days ago with congestion of the lungs, is much better, and her physician, Dr. Hastings, believes she is now in a fair way to recover.

The public are cordially invited to attend a test-trial of the American Vapor stove at No. 9 Commercial street, between 2 and 3 o'clock this afternoon. Baking, broiling and ironing will be the main features of the trial.

Henry D. George, who served in Company K, Engineers of the West, Missouri Volunteers, in the war of 1861, has been granted a bounty, which he can receive by communicating with his attorney, Will D. Gould. He was last heard from at San Juan Capistrano.

Len. J. Thompson returned last Saturday from a two weeks' hunting expedition on the Malaga ranch. He says he killed twelve deer, ate venison until he was black in the face and could no longer tell the truth; he then concluded it was about time for him to return home.

The now notorious wife-beating case, People vs. Henry Groben, comes up this morning for a second trial before Justice Adams. Tears and evidence will be on hand as usual, and conjugal bliss and felicity, graphically depicted, will again stir with envy the bosom of some Benedick jurors.

Francisco Sanchez, an Indian, who was arrested on Monday for stealing a sack of onions, was arraigned before the Police Court yesterday morning and tried on a charge of petit larceny. He was found guilty as charged and fined $25, in default whereof Sanchez will do city work for twenty-five days.

Geo. O. Ford has purchased the interest of Mr. Schmidt in the Grand Central Hotel, and will hereafter conduct the same. Mr. Ford is an old hotel man of Placer, Nevada and Lassen counties in the northern part of the State. This commodious hotel will be refitted and otherwise improved.

The Grand Lodge of the I. O. G. T. will convene in San Francisco on the 3d of October. The Pacific Coast Steamship Company have generously consented to carry all delegates and visiting members of the I. O. G. T. lodges in Southern California to the convention at half-fare. It is expected that a large concourse of Good Templars will be present.

Shocking Death of a San Bernardino Boy.

Arthur Ashdown, the fourteen-year-old son of Thomas Ashdown, of San Bernardino, was killed by the caving of a bank at the Goodcell brickyard at that place on the 23d inst. He, with some companions, was playing in the excavations made by the workmen in taking out clay for making brick, when a mass of dirt fell upon him. He was taken out by the workmen as soon as possible, but death seemed to have been almost instantaneous.

The Cock of the Walk.

Mr. C. A. Keifer, the great poultry man of Sterling, Illinois, is now in Los Angeles. He will remain here about six weeks, looking the land over, in which time he expects to select a location and prepare it for the reception of his fancy stock which he will remove here, and then return to Illinois and transfer his business, household goods, etc., to this city. He will find a hearty welcome here.

The Blockade Broken.

Shipping over the southern route will be open again to-day. The washouts have so demoralized the running of trains that for ten days past there has been a complete embargo put upon the shipment of perishable goods, much to the detriment of commission men and fruit dealers of this city, who have suffered severe losses by the sudden stoppage of their trade. Growers have also suffered by the home market being glutted.

A Social Club.

Bebee Clark, one of the easy morality class, was arraigned before Justice Adams yesterday on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon upon the person of one of her sister sinners. The charge of assault was dismissed by the magistrate, as it was clearly shown that the alleged assault was merely a battery. She was then brought up on the charge of battery, and pleading guilty was fined $12.

The Normal.

The Branch Normal School opened its doors yesterday for the admittance of pupils for the current session. The total number of pupils admitted cannot be correctly given for the next few days. On the 9th of next month the dedication ceremonies will take place, a full report of which will be furnished to the readers of the TIMES.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Ed. Germain, of Deming, New Mexico, is in town.

Mrs. M. Feintuch, mother of Feintuch Bros., of this city, arrived here last Monday from San Francisco, on a few weeks' visit to the "City of the Angels" and vicinity.

Mr. V. A. Pernot, formerly head clerk in the postoffice of this city, but who has latterly been engaged in business for himself in Kansas City, has disposed of his interests there and is now on his way back here. Upon his arrival, he will accept the position of mailing clerk in the postoffice. At last accounts Mr. Pernot was lingering in Arizona.

Mr. McInerny, a former resident of this city, who has for some time been officiating as manager of the S. P. R. R. Hotel at Yuma, is now in the office of the St. Charles Hotel, to the delight of his many friends. Mac, though young, is adequate to his calling, and it is hoped that he will be established in a hotel of his own in the near future.

James Caley, National Secretary of the Order of United American Mechanics, a purely beneficial order, arrived in this city Monday evening, and this evening will organize a council of that order here. A large list of charter members has been obtained, numbering about fifty names and comprising some of the best business and professional men of the city.

THE PEACH CROP.

A Superabundant Yield—More Canneries Needed.

Los Angeles county horticulturists are suffering for the lack of a market for their peaches. The crop is an immense one, and the cannery at this city is not able to handle it. They are said to be overstocked now, and are only taking such fruit as has been contracted for in advance. It is represented that there are tons of peaches now dropping from the trees and rotting upon the ground in the orchards of this county. The demand is for another cannery, so that the fruit interests of this section, which have become one of the most important interests of the country, may not suffer. If the fruit cannot be canned why cannot it be dried? The large Alden drier of the canning company is not in use we are informed, but there are a large number of small, private driers in operation, and they are doing good work. A remedy is thus at hand for the fruit growers, and they would do well to adopt it rather than allow their fruit to go to waste. If in any community there is no one person who wishes to go to the expense of procuring a drier, let several of them join and share the expense and save their fruit. Yesterday Mr. Fred Upson, of Anaheim, brought up a load of peaches, but could not dispose of them to the cannery, so he purchased a Zimmerman drier and took out with him, determined to be independent of canneries and all the world. Let others do likewise.

Brown's Thermopylæ.

No day is so absolutely dull that some little excitement is wanting to enliven the neighborhood of the City Court. Yesterday, when a deputy-sheriff went to the establishment to levy an execution on J. A. Brown's property, he was refused admission to the premises by a fair member of the weaker and more fragile sex, who peremptorily refused to let anyone enter except over her dead body. No officer could be found so ungallant as to force his presence upon a lady so dangerously opposed to it. However, of her own volition she escorted one of the deputy-sheriffs to Justice Adams' Court, where one of those rare and racy scenes ensued which exhibit woman's astuteness to so remarkable a degree. After a cross-fire of female wit and judicial remarks, the fair Mrs. Jane Doe Dunne was requested to give bail in the sum of $500 for her appearance to answer the charge of resisting an officer, otherwise to step over to Captain Thompson's office and admire the neatness and cleanliness of its surroundings for the space of some twenty-four hours. There was some talk of habeas corpus, but nothing very definite on the subject could be ascertained. The records show no issuance of the writ. The denouement is yet to come.

A Valiant Nimrod.

Mr. W. M. Kennedy, of Omaha, one of the guests at Homewood Hall, Dr. J. L. Lenterman's fine place in La Canyada, had the good fortune to bring down a fine deer the other day, while out hunting rabbits. He was not hunting deer, and had gone up to the tunnel which supplies water for the place, and the deer started up near him. He fired with his shotgun, which was loaded with No. 6 bird-shot, striking it in the side of the head, stunning the animal, and then as it turned its head shot it on the other side. He put five charges into it, but got his game.

Have the Body.

A writ of habeas corpus has been obtained in the case of the people vs. Mrs. Patterson, of San Diego tumor fame. The hearing on the merits of the writ is to be had to-day before Judge Howard, and will doubtless excite much attention from the curious.

Frank Toal has also applied for the great writ from the Superior Court, and a hearing in his case is to be held to-day in the same department. Toal, who has lost his dogs by poison and who is in a fair way to lose his wife by the process of law, does not want to lose his personal liberty.

The New Watering-Place.

Judge R. M. Widney has ordered lumber for his street railway from the railroad near Wilmington to Willmore, and will immediately begin the work of construction. He has also ordered the lumber for a house which he will build on his lots there. This new city, as yet on paper only, is attracting much attention and a great deal of favorable comment. Nearly all who visit the site are charmed with its location and fine beach, and nearly all invest in a lot or two. The place is likely to become a famous resort and watering-place.

Chinese Gamblers.

The Chinese gambling cases came up yesterday before Justice Adams. That of Hi Loo, the first called, was dismissed on motion of the Assistant District Attorney on the ground of lack of evidence. These cases were brought under the State law, under which the crime consists in the running and owning of a gambling establishment. It appears that when the officers raided these places they caught a number of Chinese in the act of gambling, but there was no evidence to show who was the owner of the game.

Overland from San Francisco.

Rev. A. Armstrong, who arrived here a few days ago and bought a home on the corner of Ninth and Flower streets, purchased an outfit while in San Francisco, and drove leisurely overland from there to Los Angeles, taking note of the different sections of country traversed and the inducements offered in each to parties seeking homes. After mature observation, he is emphatically of the opinion that Los Angeles has the most promising outlook of any point visited, and he is well pleased with his choice.

The New Street Railroad.

Considerable objection to the proposed street-car line seems to prevail among property-owners along Spring street, their principal argument being that with a line already in operation along Main and Fort streets, the proposed Spring-street route is superfluous. The prevailing sentiment of the community, however, seems to be in favor of the project, especially in view of the fact that it is to be a flat-rail line.

PROGRESS AND IMPROVEMENTS.

Real Estate and Building—Important Transactions.

In the Hunter tract Dr. Darling, a recent new-comer, has purchased two five-acre lots; price paid, $130 per acre. Dr. Cunningham has purchased 13 acres, same price. Each of the above gentlemen will build a residence at once.

Mr. M. S. Foster, late from Illinois, but more recently from Santa Barbara, has purchased 50 acres at $120 per acre, and will build two good houses thereon at once—one for himself and family, and the other for his son and family.

ORCHARD TRACT.

This is a new tract recently laid out in the square bounded by Third and Fourth and Los Angeles and San Pedro streets. Four houses are now being built in this tract by recent purchasers of lots, ranging in cost from $450 to $1000.

Messrs. Judson, Morgan & Mills commenced yesterday the erection of one of a series of houses in this tract, which will be offered for site as fast as completed at about $1000 each. C. B. Quesne, recently from Ventura county, has just commenced building a house to cost about $450.

CELIS VINEYARD TRACT.

H. W. Mills has sold his new house in this tract to Otis N. Johnson, recently from Iowa, for $750 Mills & Pomeroy sold four lots in this tract yesterday to two new-comers, who will build thereon shortly.

Mr. A. K. Hanna, of Pasadena, who came here from Cincinnati last December, has invested considerable money in real estate and buildings. He purchased five acres of improved land and house in Pasadena which he has still further improved and beautified, and where himself and family now reside. He is now building two fine houses adjoining that of Mr. O. T. Barker on Fort street between Fourth and Fifth. They are each two stories in height and will cost about $2,000 each. He is also building houses in the Rivera and Viguolo vineyards tract on the extension of New Los Angeles street, to cost about $1000 each. Los Angeles is receiving daily accessions to her population of such sagacious and public spirited people, a class of people who will add materially in its development.

Mr. Hurlbut has sold his new house on Downey avenue, East Los Angeles, and has purchased four lots on the corner of Downey and Griffin avenues. He will commence buildinga house on two of the lots at once. Work was commenced yesterday on A. B. Gates's new house, corner of Fort and Fifth streets.

Bids will be opened to-day for the erection of Albert Brown's fine residence on Hill street. The estimated cost is about $7000.

Contractors and builders report building operations very brisk and mechanics very scarce.

ANOTHER STREET RAILROAD.

Interview with Mr. Hellman Regarding His Proposed New Line.

Owing to the importance and the probable benefits to the city of the new street railroad, which Mr. I. W. Hellman proposes to build, should the Council grant him a franchise, a TIMES reporter called on that gentleman, at the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, in order to ascertain his intentions regarding the construction of the road. The TIMES' representative was politely invited to the President's room, where the following conversation ensued:

"Mr. Hellman, is the street railroad which you intend building to be built by a company or by yourself individually?"

"It is to be constructed and equipped from my private resources. My object in taking this step is two-fold. I desire to find a safe investment and also to benefit and improve the city."

"What is about the distance traversed by your proposed road, and about how often will the cars run?"

"The distance between the terminal points of the road is about four miles. The cars will run every fifteen minutes, or oftener, if the exigencies of the people require it."

"Are the cars to be of the same construction as the ones at present used?"

"The cars, and for that matter everything connected with my road, are to be of the latest improved pattern. The cars are to be double cars, drawn by two horses, like those seen in San Francisco."

"Last Saturday night, at the Council meeting, you stated, Mr. Hellman, that you would not use the T rail, but would put down the flat rail. Do you object to stating the reasons for your preference?"

"Not at all. They are simply, the flat rail, which is flush with the street, presents no obstacles to vehicles using the street; it is easily crossed without any danger to vehicles' wheels, and the cars can run over it much more smoothly than they do over the present projecting rail. You can state, Mr. Reporter, that I have no idea of speculation in building this road; for two or three years, at least, I will realize no profit from it, but I will have materially added to the comforts of my fellow citizens, and, as I said before, will have secured a safe investment for my money. I intend making this a first-class road, as good as any in the country, and any changes that I find necessary, either in increase of cars, or running the cars at shorter intervals than I now contemplate, I shall make at once."

The Philadelphia Mining Journal says that there are 5,110 men employed in the copper mines of Graham county, Arizona. As the census gives Graham county a total population of 4,229 only, this statement appears to be "watered."

The coal camp at Deer creek is reported to be in a lively and prosperous condition. The work of development is being vigorously pushed on the Bonanza mine, the main shaft being down to a depth of 120 feet, all in good solid coal.

A remarkable strike is reported in the Copper Queen mine at Bisbee. A body of ore, a wonder in richness and quantity, has been struck at the 300 foot level. It consists of red oxides and native copper, and averages seventy per cent. It is at present forty feet wide and not crossed yet.

During a terrific storm which was raging at Bisbee Wednesday night, a tall tree growing on the summit of the mountain was struck by lightning. The subtle fluid ignited the tree, which burst into a flame from top to bottom and burned brilliantly in dense darkness for nearly half an hour. The pillar of the fire was gazed at by the entire population, and is described as presenting a singularly weird and beautiful spectacle.

It is said that Messrs. Newmark & Co. have already ordered the fountain which they presented to the city. Before another month is past this beautiful gift will adorn the street in front of Temple block.
